"Do you wish to go to church this evening? Father is going to preach, you know," the minister's fair daughter asked. The young man considered. "Um. The last time I went he rather fell on some of my small failings. Do you know what his text will be tonight?" "Yes, 'Love One Another.' He regarded the round pink check approvingly. "Suppose," he suggested softly, "that we let the old gentleman go preach while we sit on the porch and practice?"

Side Lights On The Circus Business

By

D. W. WATT

There is one big expense with the great circus that the average person knows very little about, and that is the expense of advertising the show ahead. With the average large car there is at least three advertising cars and from sixty to eighty men, and in this the visits your town comes as a rule, far ahead of the first advertising car, which is known as car No. 1. This is the contracting agent for the show.

On Tuesday of last week, May 26, W. H. Horton, contracting agent with the Ringling show, came to Janesville. He arrived in the morning and left for Chicago at noon.

Will Warner, who is known around the show, commenced his career in the show business with the Ringling Bros. Twenty-five years ago this summer. He was then a boy less than eighteen years of age, but was bound to travel with the circus in any capacity that he might be wanted. Horton would do anything to get a start in the busines.

Horton's home was at Pittsford, where the show exhibited there. He was given a position as bill poster on Car No. 1 with the show, and by attending strictly to his business, he was soon advanced from one position to another until today he is the general contracting agent of the great Ringling Shows, and for many years has put in 365 days in the year, always working for the best interest of the Ringling Shows.

From here Mr. Horton went east to help make arrangements for the show to enter Canada, which is no small task, needs a man of experience like Mr. Horton, one of the men that knows how.

The first of this week Car No. 1 of the Hazenbeck & Wallace Shows, came to Janesville to cover the billboards and do the country work, and has always been the custom in the business where two circuses show at the same time, that the smaller shows, although they may be many weeks apart, may always deem it advisable to do a little of what is known in the business as opposition work. So that the small flying squadrons of the Ringling Show were here with large posters and small hand bills asking the people to wait for the great Ringlings. The stories of the different bill posters and even some of the managers of the cars, where they outwitted the other fellow, are always told by the man who has an idea that he put it all over the other fellow.

In the poster work of today and that of thirty years ago there is a great difference. In '84 which was known as the White Elephant season between the White Elephant and Barnum Shows, was the year of real opposition work. The two shows showed side by side on Broad street in Philadelphia for two weeks, and after leaving that city took practically the same route west to Chicago. This made it very expensive for owners for the reason that the agents were so anxious to get control of newspapers, lots and billboards that in many cases, they simply asked, "How much?" and gave them an amount for which upon payment was signed that ended the warfare between the two great shows, and not only cut the advertising expenses of the shows in two, but also made less demand for high priced agents in the different departments. The Ringlings and Hazenbeck & Wallace Shows have fixed their dates more than two months apart, so they think it necessary to work along that line.

Last week John and Al Ringling went east to visit the Barnum Show of which they are proprietors, and as they thought, their visit had a good effect. They turned away people and closed the largest week's business of the season so far this year.

In 1888 Joe Warner of Lansing, Michigan, was the general agent of the Adair Foreign troupe. Mr. Warner was one of the men in the business that were known as the "Ring," meaning that he was one of the four of the highest priced agents in the business. We showed at Lansing, Mr. Warner's home town, that year, getting in there early Sunday morning and showing Monday. I had the pleasure of being one of a party invited to a dinner at Mr. Warner's home Sunday evening. Now Joe Warner has passed away and made his last contract for his show called by death on May 21st last.

The following letter written to a magazine gives many particulars regarding Mr. Warner's career in the business.

Lansing, Mich., May 21.—At this place, which has been his home for over 60 years, Jos. E. Warner, known throughout the circus world as the man who "discovered" Jumbo, is dead. Between seasons and at other times, he has successfully engaged as general agent or circuit owner. Mr. Warner had found time to serve Michigan's capital city as mayor, city clerk, alderman and twice as a member of the board and fire commissioners.

"The first circus I ever saw fastened upon me a desire to become a showman," Mr. Warner had remarked shortly before his death. His first engagement was with Spalding & Powers' North American Circus, which he joined at New Orleans in 1853. In 1854 he was under the same management, which had become known, however, as Dan Rice's Great Show. In 1857 he became sole owner of J. E. Warner's Great Pacific Menagerie and Circus. In the spring of 1876 he sold his show to California partners. He remained with the attraction in its new home in capacity, in 1879 he joined the Great London Circus, owned and managed by the late James A. Bailey. In 1880 when a combination was formed with P. T. Barnum and the title of Barnum, Bailey & Hutchinson's Greatest Show on Earth, Mr. Warner remained with that company as general agent. Much of his time was spent abroad as the American representative of the great circus, this capacity he was accorded full authority to purchase attractions for the American show. His first great strike was the recovery and purchase of the elephant "Jimbo" and reviving it as a "secon" in attractions was his procurement of the traditional wild man from Borneo.

CARDS OUT FOR WIN AGAINST FOOTVILLE

WESTERN ATHLETES IN CHICAGO MEET

Janesville White Sox Also Expect Victory Against Fort Atkinson Nine On Sunday.

Unless the weather man again stops the Cardinals by sending a severe display of cloudy weather from his perch at Mechanics Hill, the players will be out for a victory against the Footville White Sox in the scheduled meeting at the Driving Park Sunday afternoon. The full force of the home nine will be on the bring line to take the measure of this noted aggregation from Footville.

Crandall or Butters will twirl for the Cards and it will take considerable amount of classy heaving to keep the Footville stickers quiet. For every member of the visiting nine knows how to use the war club property. That will be behind the back and it is safe to say the visitors will not steal more than the diamonds and the bleachers with him doing the pegging to the sacks. Lenahan will cover first and usual the Cardinal line-up will hold down the other positions.

It is not known definitely who will pitch for the visitors, but report has it that Bush, the Beloit North End star artist, has been hired to oppose the Cards. Bush has two defeats chalked against him from the Cards and if he pitches, the Cards hope to get the third notch down.

With reorganized team, the Janesville White Sox travel to Fort Atkinson Sunday in hopes of tasting of the victory against the Fort nine. Ulbra and Hendale will be the local battery. In the infiel'd the Sox have Mullen and Lamphere, two fast fielders, to help them bolster up the defensive work.

The Janesville Stars meet the First Ward Yankees Sunday. For the Stars, Hoveland and Spohn will be the battery and for the First Ward Bidwell and Drake.

Fourteenth Annual "Big Nine" Conference Held at Stagg Field, Chicago.

Special to the Gazette

Chicago, June 6.—The cream of athletic talent of the middle west and far west was gathered at Stagg Field today for the annual "Big Nine" track and field meet. It was the fourteenth annual conference event and it brought together more than 500 track and field men from colleges and universities stretching to the Pacific coast.

Wisconsin sent the largest squad and the Badgers were hopeful of carrying off honors. Chicago, Illinois and Missouri had large entry lists and their followers, massed about the stadium, urged on the athletes to victory with a pandemonium of cheers.

The nine conference universities had easily the largest entry lists, but the far west would not concede first place to the middle western schools. Leland Stanford University had a visiting team that was depended upon by the little knot of Pacific coast footers to carry the championship back to California. Smaller universities and colleges had their individual stars entered and record-breaking performances were expected. Among the universities and colleges represented were Chicago, Illinois, Wisconsin, Northwestern, Ohio State, Indiana, Purdue, Minnesota, Missouri, Leland Stanford, Kansas, Colorado, University of California, Luke Forest college, DePauw, University of Denver, Nebraska, Colorado College, Oberlin college, Michigan Agricultural college, Drake, Notre Dame university and Kansas State Agricultural college.

Sport Snap Shots

The board of directors of the Cincinnati Reds are likely to be in a pretty pickle this fall. From the record that Buck Herzog has been piling up this spring and summer it is clear that the Cincinnati can't buy at the close of the season would be a rather trying and none too graceful undertaking. But the Red directors will tie a can to Buck all right if there is any way they can possibly do it. Perhaps they don't feel unkindly toward him, but they have little choice in the matter. Managers always have been cannoned in Cincinnati at the close of the year and Herzog must be no exception. Red fans would never forgive the club if it let the same manager rule for more than one year, if Charley continues to win, and it appears that he will. Mr. Harry Herrmann and his director friends will scratch their heads in perplexity. And they'll probably agree that even though Herzog landed the team in the first division, they don't like his table manners. And so he'll have to go.

It seems that the world is getting better. Or is it the baseball world is at least according to a remark of Eddie Collins in his recent magazine where he speaks of Connie Mack, the time was when one player would never suggest to another a means of improving his play. "When I was catching behind the bat," says Connie, or words to this effect, "I was good enough on my throw to second, but very weak at pegging 'em to third. And while every other player in the league hit and benefited by it not a one of us ever mentioned it to me or tried to show me how to improve it. It would not be that way today. The boys all help each other along and make suggestions though they are on teams that are fighting bitterly for a pennant."

Cornell as usual has been slipping it all over all her adversaries in the matter of track athletics. Aside from football the Cornell girls are in advance of all the other schools. And in the standings of all round athletic achievement Cornell walks way ahead of the others in spite of such cases of individual brilliance as Brickley and Mahan at Yale. Her excellence on field, track or water is such that it is perhaps well that she doesn't shine on the gridiron. If she was able to develop a football elbow on a par with her other athletic teams there would be nothing to it. During the football season she may suffer a little humiliation, but at the present season of the year she makes all the other schools look like bedridden invalids.

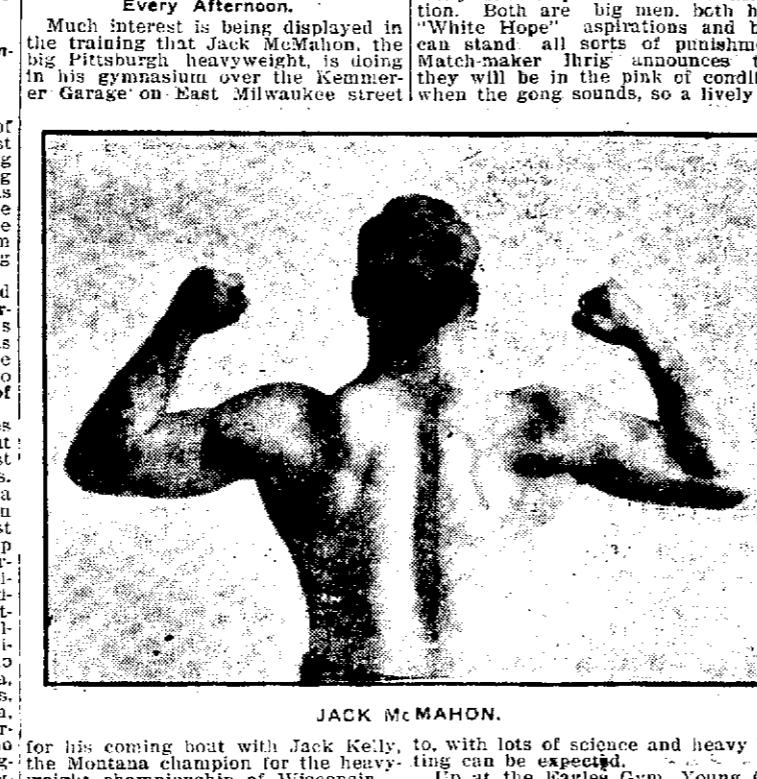

Arlie Latham, baseball's funniest coach and former player has gone back to whence he came. The Lynn (Mass.) team offered Arlie a contract as coach and assistant manager and he signed it. Lynn is the place where Arlie first started for the big show, it being there that he was noticed and grabbed by one of the major teams. And Arlie will probably cut his capers for the bush league fans with as great a spirit as he did for the fans of the big show.

John J. McGraw, who doesn't hesitate to announce that the Giants will cop the rag this season, has spoken to his players about over-confidence and the folly of acquiring same. Why don't you speak to yourself, John?

Walter Johnson is often called the Big Swede. Which isn't a marker compared to what it is thought Clark Griffith will call him if he hopes to lead the Feds next fall.

for his coming bout with Jack Kelly, the Montana champion for the heavyweight championship of Wisconsin. Kelly is a big fellow who delights in his work. He is an expert boxer uses good head work and is clever with his feet, shifty and apparently a good ring general. He to, with lots of science and heavy hitting can be expected.

Up at the Eagles Gym, Young Cox and Luther McCarthy are preparing for their bouts. McCarthy is to meet Ward of Beloit and for a youngster is showing good form. He and Cox go to it in genuine style and keep each other busy during their training rounds. Cox is rounding into shape fast for his go with Young Scotty of Milwaukee and should give an excellent account of himself when the time comes. He is fast, but to the fact that he has been handicapped by a bad hand for some time past, would have been in the game before this.

The management of the bouts report that the advance sale of seats has been unusually large this time and that present indications are that there will be a good sized audience present to witness the contests. The fact that the winner of the McMahon and Kelly bout will meet Klosky, Platteville's giant, gives added interest to the event.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

The loss of the "Empress of Ireland" in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, with the sacrifice of more than one thousand lives, records one of the great tragedies of the year, and next to the Titanic disaster, has no parallel in recent history.

Many of the passengers were below decks and drowned like rats in a cage, in fact, many of them passed from peaceful sleep to the long sleep which knows no awakening, for the accident occurred at two o'clock in the morning and the great liner sank in ten minutes.

Among the passengers saved was Edward Leybold of Ottawa, and the thrilling story of his experience, as he and his wife went down with the ship, is published in an Ottawa paper of recent late. It is a story of tragedy from real life, told by Mr. Seybold himself, and is worth reproducing. He says:

"On the morning of the accident, about two o'clock, I was lying awake in my cabin, when I noticed the Empress slowing up. Then she blew three whistles and by that I knew there was some fog around. I next heard another steamer answer with three whistles. The Empress again whistled three times and the other steamer replied with three whistles. This time I noticed the sound from this other vessel was much nearer to us. Again the Empress whistled three times. What seemed only a moment later, I heard a crunching noise, I jumped out of my berth opened the window in my stateroom, which was on an upper deck on the starboard side and looking out saw that the Storstad had rammed right into the starboard side of the Empress. Then I saw the coal vessel back away from us. Soon after, that is in a few seconds, I noticed the Empress list badly to starboard. I at once came from the window of the cabin and told my wife to get up. Without any delay I got out a life belt for her. She slipped on an ulster over her night dress and over her ulster coat I fastened the life belt. My wife then helped to fasten a life belt around my waist. Meanwhile I had hurriedly slipped on a tweed suit and an ulster coat over my pajamas.

"I might add that when I looked out of the window I noticed there was little fog near our vessel, but I could see the coast line about four miles away. By the time my wife and I had got the life belts on, the boat was listing considerably to the starboard. Then I took hold of her hand and keeping hold of it tightly, we left our cabin, went along the passage outside to the cafe, and made for the port side, which by this time was almost parallel with the water.

"I was feeling very exhausted, for you know I had been very ill prior to leaving Ottawa to go to England. However, I helped my wife to clamber on to the port side of the sinking ship and three men assisted me alongside my wife. The ship was by this time lying on her starboard side. All was dark, but along the 600 foot upturned port side of the ship I could see silhouetted against the darkness fully five hundred people. They were not screaming, but moaning. I can hear that awful moaning even when I am asleep.

"We felt the ship sinking fast. I took my wife by the hand and said to her: 'My dear, hold on, I am exhausted. I cannot live long myself. Be brave and save yourself!' No sooner had I said these words when the ship sank suddenly, carrying us and the hundreds of others down with it, who were on the side of the ship. Down we went into that awful swirl, down, down. I should think fully 50 feet; but we held each other's hands tightly all the time. Weak though I was, I did not lose my head, even when we went down in the swirl.

"It has been said, I understand, that the boilers did not burst. I know that they did. When they exploded my wife was torn or blown away from me by such a force that almost tore my right arm from its socket."

Here Mr. Seybold showed the reporter his right arm which is badly wounded, the result of being severely scalded. He and his wife must have been perilously near the boilers when they went down.

"The force of the explosion," continued Mr. Seybold, "not only blew my wife away from me, but blew me up to the surface of the water. She was killed by the explosion, for when her body was found eighteen hours after the accident, there was not a drop of water in it."

Two hours later Mr. Seybold was picked up, more dead than alive, and his story will have much to do in aiding the courts to place responsibility. The fact that the fog was not heavy, indicates gross carelessness on the part of somebody, and it looks bad for the captain of the collier Storstad.

Memorial services were held last Sunday in all the churches in Ottawa, where some three hundred bodies recovered from the wreck, awaited burial.

One of the pastors said that the catastrophe could not be considered in the light of Divine judgment, as among the passengers was the flower of the Salvation Army, four hundred strong. This seems like a far-fetched argument for in this age of intelligence the fact is generally recognized that human carelessness and not Divine vengeance is responsible for the great tragedies of life.

We are slow to learn except through the hard school of experience. It required the loss of the Titanic to perfect our wireless service and impress the importance of ocean equipment, and the "Empress" tragedy shows that we have yet much to acquire in the way of safety knowledge.

The railroads of the country have recently issued a pamphlet for general distribution, entitled "Safety First," and the industrial world never gave so much attention to safeguarding employees as it is giving today.

The danger which confronts the most of us is not ocean disaster, and we are not likely to be mixed up in a railroad wreck. The most common cause of accident today in all parts of the land, is from the automobile, so generally used by so many people lacking both judgment and experience.

The eighteen hour trains running between Chicago and New York were found to be too fast for safety, even in the hands of the best men in the employ of the companies, and so they were abandoned. But the average man behind the wheel of a road engine soon develops the speed mania. We complain about our regulative laws, but they are not half rigid enough and they should be enforced to the limit. The most of us have all the time there is, and the rights of other people should be respected.

In speaking of the ill-fated "Empress," some one said it was a thousand tragedies because the loss of every life was significant. To the survivors it was also a tragedy which will long haunt them as a nightmare.

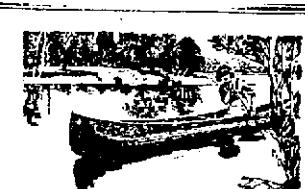

The story of heroism and sacrifice will never be written. Mr. Seybold was only one of five hundred who faced death suddenly and unexpectedly, and lived to tell the story. The people who went down with a moan and a prayer, were none the less heroic.

These great tragedies, which come to us from time to time, like a shock, and cause us to stop and think for a moment, are no more tragic to the individual home than the daily experiences of every day life, for current history is crowded with tragedy. The hearts which bleed and the voices that moan are a common heritage, and all over the land the heroism of sacrifice pays silent tribute to the bravery which suffers silently and endures.

Mr. Seybold attracted attention because of his prominence in the city where he lived, and the whole community sympathized with him, and rallied to his support. But among his shipmates were a thousand souls from many lands whose lives went out like a flash, and whose death brought sorrow to many homes.

God's common people, so numerous as to excite but little interest and command but little attention. To these our hearts should go out in loving sympathy, for the procession of mourners is constantly going by, and a word of comfort and good cheer is every timely.

CANDIDATES GALORE MAKE APPEARANCE

REPUBLICAN AND DEMOCRATIC ASPIRANTS FOR GOVERNORIAL HONORS IN RACE.

FIELD NOT YET CLOSED

Open Game for the Faithful of Both Parties to Seek Preference of The Voters.

(By Bob Acres.)

N. B.: This is one of a series of articles written on the Wisconsin political situation exclusively for the Gazette.

"United we stand Divided we fall."

If the republican and democratic brethren in charge of the political destinies of their respective party's do not look out they will discover that some bright young man, perhaps he will be fresh from the country at that, is going to slip in, collar the votes of the people of the state and sit in the governor's chair at Madison before they know it.

For internal bickering the two parties are having a Kilkenny cat and dog affair of it all the time. When the leaders do not know who to attack next they swing in line by abusing the old line Stalwart, the Home Rule advocate or even take up tariff as a relief from the personal warfare they are waging.

This last week I was amused to see the statements of some of the leading bankers of the state, no I did not mean that, I meant some of the Wisconsin bankers, announcing that the Wisconsin bankers should get into politics. What kind of Goshen what has H. A. Moehlenpah of Clinton been doing for years, he has run for congress, he has run for the nomination for Governor and now he wants the rest of the bankers to do likewise.

Moehlenpah sees a great light and considers Tom Morris the man who is holding that light up. Now Moehlenpah is a democrat and Morris a republican and perhaps by looking closely you can see the hole in the person of Morris takes some of the called effort to boost the old line "Stalwarts" into office again and poor pooh's at the high taxes and so does Moehlenpah. "Two hearts with but a single thought." It is a funny combination when you consider it.

They whisper it about the state that John Aylward has been crowded out of his aspirations for United States Senatorial honors. He has the federal job now and even some of his friends say he should not hog the whole thing but give some one else a chance. They said that the golden apple of discord, the gubernatorial nomination and it is hardly possible John will take a bite out of it at least.

Then there is Evan Evans. Evan is a nice chap, he supported Karel two years ago and did good work too. He is being prodded on to make the gubernatorial race. M. A. Hoyt of Milwaukee might be induced to appear as a compromise candidate and the way Mel could make things hum if he took the stump would be a caution. He was La Follette man once but not now. Like Hoard and a lot of others he saw the light before it was too late.

Indications are that it is going to be Hall or Hatton as La Follette's choice. Hatton appears to have the lead just at present but you never can tell whether he will do a political flip flop and land back in the dressing room or not. With Walter Owen out of the race and Roethe clear outside the pallisade, it has got to be Hull or Hatton. If McGovern should favor Hull it would be Hull, if Hull then Hatton.

Talking about McGovern you have noticed he is out for the Senators job all right. His platform is a funny old thing any way. It is a hoot sort of talk of speech that really says nothing and means nothing and the Governor is going to stand on his record as governor in his race for the Senatorship. McGovern took one at this job some years ago before he became Governor so he knows what he is up against and it is going to be lots of fun to see his friends who want to still be La Follette's friends side stepping the issue. Now there are the old line Stalwarts. They are going to have their state convention whether anyone likes it or not. They plan for various county conventions to select their delegates and on June 23 they are going to meet in Madison and do what? Well, places now made are put to state ticket in nomination. Adopt a straight platform, doubtless, on the high issues of national politics, and go ahead.

Chairman Charles Pierce, who by the way comes from Janesville, is much quoted throughout the state in the home rule discussion as being to the opinion that it would be best to wait as to the holding of a state convention by the element of citizens, non-partisan in nature, until it is seen who is going to be nominated for governor, by either the republicans or democrats, and if a suitable man is named, why endorse him.

With all this talk about state tickets the leaders must not neglect the legislature. To have this sort or that sort of a governor is all right, but he is merely a cog in the wheel and is not really an essential part in the law-making organization of the state. This work is done in the legislature and the question of taxation with apologies to Tom Morris, will play an important part. Think it over.

DO YOU KNOW WHY -- You Can't Always Bluff Your Way Through Life?

How He Became the Robin Hood of Mexico, and Why He Hates Diaz, Orozco and Huerta - His Real Character Told By One Who Is Personally Acquainted With the Constitutional General

At the past three years General Francisco Villa, the fighting head of the Constitutional Army in Mexico, has held the center of the stage with the American press, one day he is lauded as a marvellous military genius and half Indian, and the next day the same newspaper will be found denouncing him as an ignorant butcher of men and a negro. Indeed, if one were to believe all the reports it would seem that he is a living Doctor Jekyll and Mr. Hyde.

The writer is personally acquainted with General Villa, having seen him under various conditions; whether it has been with his wife at Juarez, at his headquarters or on the field of battle he is ever on the alert, busy of brain and body—a remarkable man in many respects, but wholly unfit to rule Mexico from the presidential chair on account of his illiteracy and fondness for fighting. "There is nothing he loves so much as being in the thick of the fray. He would rather fight than eat any time," said one of his officers.

General Villa has repeatedly declared not only to the writer, but to dozens of others that his only ambition is to see Carranza Chief Executive of Mexico, and to know that Madero's assassins have been punished. His devotion to Carranza under all circumstances goes far toward proving the truthfulness of his statement. "Villa Breaks With Carranza" has been a favorite headline in the news papers, yet the next day's dispatch tells of a conference between the two, and the differences patched up—if there ever were differences, which is extremely doubtful.

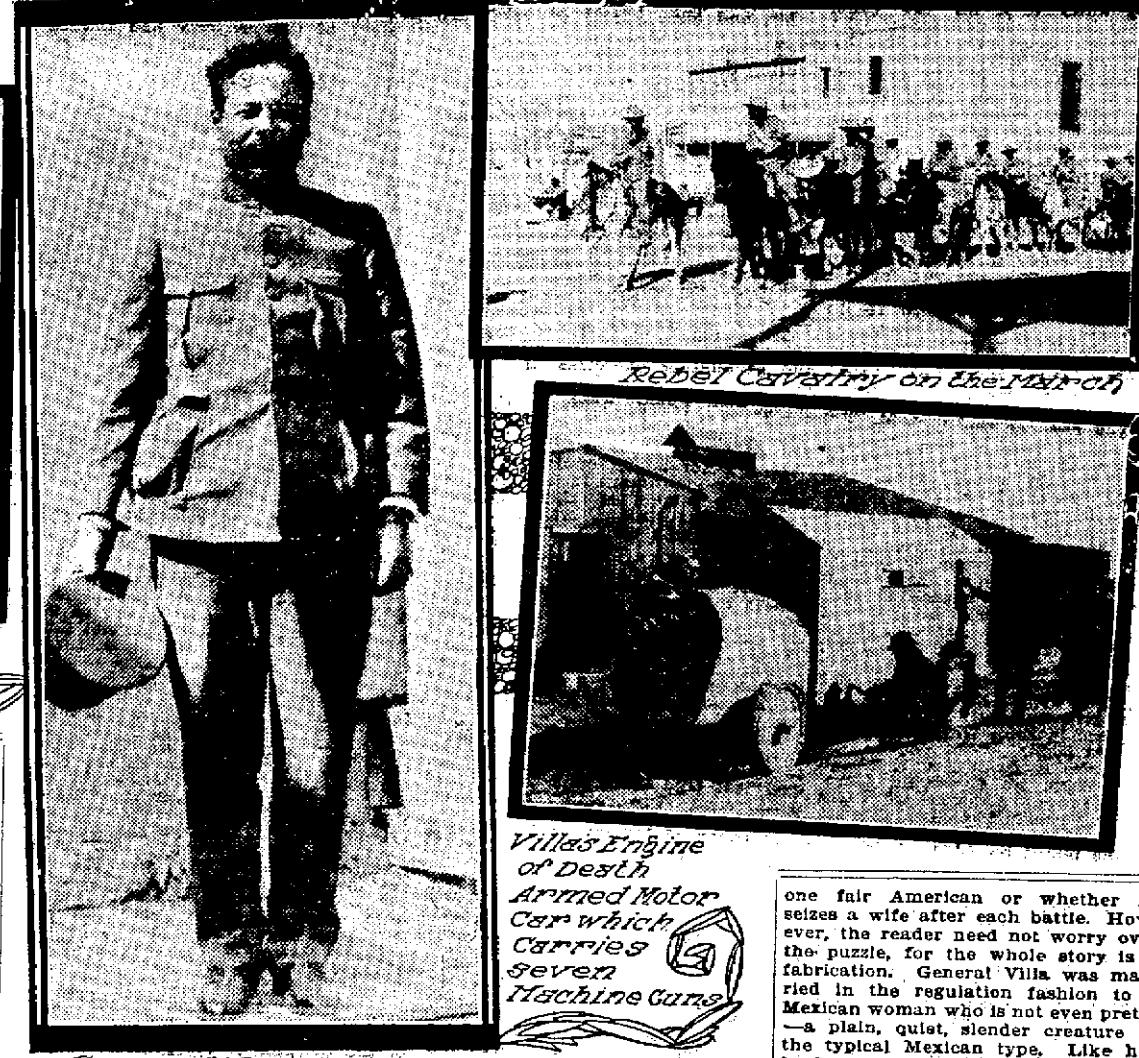

Early Life.

General Villa was born on a ranch in the State of Chihuahua. His ancestry was a mixture of Indian and Spanish—about one-fourth of the former and three-fourths of the latter. All these reports about his being a Maryland negro and at one time serving in the United States Army are made of the whole cloth. It is very doubtful as to whether Villa knows that there is such a place as Maryland. Then, too, he does not speak more than a dozen words of English, and learned to read and write only a few months ago while he was in a Mexican prison. His father died when he was a mere child, and his mother seems to have had little influence over the boy, who began to sow his wild oats early.

THE REAL VILLA

Becomes Bandit.

A story is told of how he killed a man who took his sister from the ranch, neglecting the marriage ceremony. Villa is said to have pursued the couple and, after forcing the man to marry his sister, killed him a few minutes afterwards. When this became known he was compelled to leave home or go to prison, and perhaps suffer death in expiation of his crime. So, he took to the mountains, as the Mexicans call it, and soon became the Robin Hood of Mexico. An excellent shot and a man who could control even the wildest horse, he soon gathered a band of men about him and they became a terror of the Mexican mountains for a period of more than a dozen years. Porfirio Diaz was the Dictator of Mexico at that time and, alarmed at the boldness of Villa and his men, he set a price upon the head of the young robber chief. The Rurales (the constabulary of the country) set out to capture him, and several desperate fights in the mountain passes took place. Villa succeeded in killing a score or more of the Rurales in these encounters, being slightly wounded himself. With each clash with the officers of the law his hatred for Diaz increased, and when the Madero revolution against the Diaz regime began Villa offered his services to Madero, which were at once accepted. He gathered several hundred men about him and began a campaign against the Government. Untrained in the ethics of the treatment of prisoners in modern warfare Villa's men were allowed to slay the enemy under all circumstances, and they fought with savagery which shocked the world. Diaz was compelled to flee from Mexico, and Madero became its Chief Executive.

The battle of Juarez, in 1911, brought Villa before the public, for all through the battle he was in the open in the thickest of the fight, leading his men in the most daring charges. His courage amazed the war

Hatred Of Orozco.

Villa, who in the meantime had heard of Orozco's slurs at his military ability, begged Madero to allow him to return to the army "and get even with the coward Orozco." General Victoriano Huerta, the present Dictator of Mexico, was at that time Madero's commander-in-chief, but Villa did the real fighting, and although the Orozco revolution was speedily put down, it is one of the sorrows of Villa's life that he failed to capture the leader. Frication between Huerta and Villa soon became apparent, and as Huerta was the ranking officer he accused Villa of disobeying orders and had him put in prison. But iron bars had no terrors for the ex-bandit, and he soon escaped and went back to his old life in the mountains. Then came the cold-blooded murder of Madero and the rise of Huerta.

When Villa learned of this he planned revenge. "I'll pay him back!" he said as he saddled a borrowed (?) mule after he had gathered some of his old followers about him. A few sacks of flour and some ammunition were loaded on the pack animals and the present revolution began—the revolution in which thousands of lives have been lost and millions of dollars worth of property destroyed. This was in March of 1912. Today we plain as to whether he captured only one fair American or whether he seized a wife after each battle. However, the reader need not worry over the puzzle, for the whole story is a fabrication. General Villa was married in the regulation fashion to a Mexican woman who is not even pretty—a plain, quiet, slender creature of the typical Mexican type. Like her husband, she is illiterate and speaks little English. She is devoted to her husband and follows the news of his campaign with the same eagerness and pride as shown by an American woman in the success of her husband.

General Appearance.

General Villa's appearance is a disappointment and a pleasant surprise. There is nothing of the swashbuckler bandit about him, either in manner or appearance. He is about five feet nine or ten in height and of medium build. His hair is black and slightly curly and crowns a face which is tanned from exposure to the tropical sun. His features indicate a craftsmanship amounting almost to cruelty, his mouth especially being indicative of this trait. His eyes are remarkable, for they are like bright, black beads, and seem to penetrate the inmost thoughts of the visitor. It is in this feature that the Indian is predominant. He walks erect and sits a horse in a fashion that many expert American riders might envy. In ordinary conversation his voice is low and rather pleasant, but like all the Latin he speaks rapidly. He is quick to understand, especially where military affairs are concerned, and he acts quickly on his own volition, rarely consulting his officers, who are always gathered about him. Raoul Madero, the brother of the murdered President, is always at his side, following him about like a faithful dog. He regards Villa as his brother's avenger.

Every action of General Villa shows that he is supreme, at least when Carranza is not present, and woe be to the man who disobeys his orders. The cheapness of life in Mexico is appalling, for the slightest disobedience to orders or failure in duty in the Constitutional Army means the firing squad. All this sounds horrible, and in a way it is horrible, but it seems to be the only way of keeping the average Mexican peon soldier in the straight line.

Few of Villa's men serve him because they are really fond of him—they regard him as a hero, and they fear his wrath. Then, too, he pays them and he feeds them, and feeds them well, frequently on cattle confiscated from the ranches of the Federal sympathizers. There is no regular mess in the Mexican army like that of our own. When a Mexican soldier goes to war his family usually follows him and acts as the commissary. The army on the move savors of comic opera, for straggling behind the lines are hundreds of women and children, burros and dogs. The kitchen outfit is carried on a burro. When camp is struck the women begin cooking tortillas and meat, when it can be obtained, and the husband comes for his food whenever duty permits. Should the husband be wounded or killed the wife invariably takes up his rifle and goes into battle. If he is wounded she feels that she is taking his place, and if he is killed she fights for revenge. She is frequently a good shot. This was shown in the act of the Mexican sniper at Vera Cruz, who is said to have joined the "snipers" at Vera Cruz because "the Americans had killed her brother and she wanted revenge."

A Teetotaler.

Throughout the campaign General Villa has been a teetotaler, refusing to drink any intoxicants even when flushed with victory. "A man must have a clear head," he declares. "Win." Various pronunciations have been given to his name, and there has been some difference of opinion about it. He, however, pronounces it as if it was spelled "Ves-va," which is the real pronunciation in Spanish.

That one may become an artist by this study is not promised. Artists are the born, not made product. AMERICAN MANAGER SEEKS TO ORGANIZE BRITISH RAILROADS

Cable Notes Show English Society Women Plan Brilliant Centenary Peace Ball on June 10.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

London, June 6.—An Anglo-American peace centenary ball as a preliminary to the celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of peace between English speaking peoples is promised by the British committee for June 10 next. It will be held in Royal Albert Hall, where it is expected several thousand British and American guests will present a gorgeous spectacle.

The arrangements are in the hands of a committee headed by the Duchess of Taunton, Walter Page, wife of the American ambassador, and Princess Arthur of Connaught. There are half a dozen duchesses, a long list of other titled ladies, and many prominent Americans on the committee. Among the Anglo-American women participating will be the Duchess of Marlborough, Countess Granville, Countess of Stratford, Lady Randolph Churchill, Viscountess Astor, Lady Bateman, Lady Speer, Mrs. Rideley Carter, Mrs. Victoria Woodhull Martin, and Mrs. Griffiths, wife of the consul general.

Some of the striking features of the ball are suggested in the following program:

Part I. Processions illustrating the making of America. At 12 o'clock the lights will be lowered and Columbus with his two cutters will be seen standing on the deck of the Santa Maria, the ship from which he first saw America. Below him on the floor will be seen a procession of the aboriginal inhabitants of America; then the Elizabethan settlers with Sir Walter Raleigh followed by the Pilgrim fathers, the Dutch, the French, William Penn and the Quakers, and finally the Signatories to the Treaty of 1814.

Part II. Britannia, followed by representatives of all British countries, colonies and states. Britannia will stand on a raised platform, and the British states will be immediately followed by Columbia and the representatives of the forty-eight United States of America. Columbia will take her place on the platform by the side of Britannia, and will receive congratulations from representatives of foreign countries on the attainment of a hundred years of peace.

Self Old Silver.

Some magnificent specimens of Spanish silver, stored in the vaults of a London bank for three-quarters of a century have been placed on sale. The 111 lots, of which one alone consists of a service including 369 knives and forks, are a portion of the Coutts collection, which one belonged to Harriet Mellon, Duchess of St. Albans.

Harriet Mellon, who was originally an actress, had a romantic career. Hardly art vivacious, she was one of the stage favorites of her time. She married Thomas Coutts, an octogenarian banker, and when he died she inherited the whole of his fortune, and five years later married the ninth Duke of St. Albans. She died in 1877 and during the long years since her silver has lain disturbed in the bank vaults until it was removed last week for the present sale. The wrappings had been entirely eaten away by insects, but the plate appears to be entirely new.

Most of the plate was made by Paul Storr, Philip Rundell or John Fawcett, these eminent silversmiths of the day. Most of it was purchased by Thomas Coutts. One of the most striking pieces is a pair of silver gilt center pieces, which weigh 1,233 ounces. They are fitted with circular baskets chased with wreaths of ivy and acanthus borders. The stems are fashioned to represent foliage and round them are grouped Bacchian figures. This was one of the masterpieces of Paul Storr, and was made in 1816.

Attorneys' Association.

A movement is under way to organize in the British empire a bar association modeled on lines of the American Bar association. Lord Haldane spoke before the American Bar association at its annual meeting last year, and it is believed that the attorney reports which he brought back of the activities of the American organization has hastened the determination to imitate it for the rest of the British empire.

It has long been recognized that the British bar sorely needs such an organization, which would meet at stated times for the discussion of questions of the highest interests to the profession, and it is deemed unlikely of a bar with such traditions that it should not enjoy the opportunities afforded by an organization like the American Bar association.

The Bar Council meets once a year for half an hour to adopt its annual report and pass notes of thanks, but this does not correspond with the great annual conventions of the American organization.

The movement will begin with the bar of England, then the bars of the United Kingdom will be taken in and ultimately it is planned to include dominions and colonies. It is expected that the definite proposals of the organizations will be submitted to the English bar in a short time.

American Manager.

The railroad world here is watching with much interest the efforts of Mr. Thornton, the American general manager of the Great Eastern, designed to speed up the services of the line. That much of the ill feeling which greeted his appointment as soon as it was known away is indicated by the fact that he had been appointed a member of the General Managers Conference, the first time that any man not an English subject has been elected to that organization. Thanks to the efforts of the new general manager, the towns served by the Great Eastern are now getting their Sunday papers many hours sooner than in the past.

Railway experts predict that Thornton will have no difficulty in bettering the times of the express trains of the Great Eastern, as the Great Eastern does not have to surmount the same gradients as its competitors. One of the curious anomalies of British railroads is the great difference in average train speeds on the various lines, and the gradients and length of non-stop runs on the Great Eastern will give an American expert an excellent chance to make some express records.

INCREASED WAR TAX CAUSES LOUD HOWL AMONG HUNGARIANS

Austro-Hungary Taxpayers Claim Military Expenditures Out of Proportion.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Vienna, June 6.—The Austro-Hungarian taxpayer has become gravely alarmed over the fact that the military estimates for the coming year are nearly double the army and navy expenditure of twelve years ago. From government sources there have come frequent assertions that relations with other countries are most peaceful and amicable. If this be true, the people are wondering why the government comes forward with a military budget which could not be much greater if the empire was on the verge of war.

The sum asked by the minister of war is $186,000,000. The army wants $15,000,000, while the navy will get along with $6,000,000. The remainder of $150,000,000 will be spent on the militia and reserve forces.

Seven years ago the total budget for the entire branch of service amounted to only $96,000,000, a sum considerably less than is now demanded by the army alone.

The popular protest is that the advance is utterly out of proportion to the normal increase in the nation's financial and commercial wealth, but the most disquieting feature is that the present budget contains no extraordinary items, so there is no reason to expect that next year's estimate will bring any relief.

At the time of the war scares, preceding the annexation of Bosnia in 1908 and during the more recent Balkan wars, the ministry of war took advantage of the situation to procure everything that was needed to bring the army up to a high state of efficiency, and enormous sums were spent on two mobilizations.

The rate of spending then inaugurated seems to have been kept up and each succeeding budget has been larger than the one before. Immense sums have been put into new guns and technical equipment for the engineers and field forces.

While it is contended that the general increase in the cost of labor and materials has much to do with the increasing budgets, the press has lately been discussing the influence exerted by the ring of manufacturers of steel and armaments.

Since Austria-Hungary started to build ships of the dreadnought type, three years ago, the taxpayers have been astonished to find that these are costing many millions more than warships of similar size and power built by Germany and Great Britain.

The iron and steel and other materials employed are all considerably dearer than in the other two countries named. It is charged that the government is being held up by a ring of manufacturers. Since it has settled the policy of the various government departments not to buy anything outside the country if it can be obtained in Austria-Hungary, it has been difficult to find a remedy for the situation.

Apparently the manufacturers' ring constitutes a very powerful organization. The shareholders include many influential and exalted persons.

The shares in one of the principal shipbuilding concerns have risen in the past few years from $80 to $1,840, an increase of 2,300 per cent.

The protesting members of parliament did not criticize the immigration laws of the United States, but they insisted that Norwegians detained under these laws should be properly treated.

M. Thilen, in answer to the interpolations, quoted some of the most important sections of the American immigration acts and said that too often the Norwegian immigrant failed to comply with the regulations because of ignorance. He agreed that there were cases of exceptional severity and cited that of a Norwegian woman and her four children who were detained because the paper by which her father-in-law guaranteed that the family would not become a public charge was dated a year before their arrival. She was allowed to enter while her case was on appeal after her relatives had raised $500 bail for each child, but in the meantime one of the children died in the hospital through careless treatment, according to charges to the Norwegian legation in Washington.

The minister pointed out what a difficult situation the United States had to face, with thousands of immigrants, a great many of whom were illiterate, constantly pouring into her gates. He then agreed that the foreign office should get full information about the treatment of the Norwegians at Ellis Island which should be published with extracts from American immigration laws warning Norwegians of the risks they run in attempting to enter the United States.

FIRST WOMAN GIVEN HONORS BY COLLEGE

Danish King Unwittingly Plays Prominent Part in Motion Picture Drama at Seaside.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Paris, June 6.—King Christian of Denmark, who with Queen Alexandra, recently paid an official visit to President Poincaré and Mme. Poincaré, probably is the only sovereign who has played the role of an actor in a moving picture drama.

The incident occurred at Hornbaek, a small watering place near the capital. A cinematograph company had arranged the setting for an unusual scene for the films. It was to be a shipwreck in which a young woman, her child and the woman's mother were participants. The king was promenading on the beach. Suddenly he noticed the unfortunate, the hair disheveled, who seemed to be calling for help. The king started back to rescue them with a young actor, hero of the drama, picked them up, the life belts with which they were equipped having lessened the chances of any fatal ending of the scene.

The king, finding he had been included in the picture, was vexed and expressed the desire that it be destroyed. The last half of the drama had to be played without his assistance.

For the first time since its institution in 1808, the Degree of Doctor of Letters has been gained by a woman.

The successful candidate is Medemolle Jeanne Deportal. She comes of a well-known family many of whose members have gained distinction in literature and science. Her father, Henri Duportal, is a government engineer, and her grandfather was a representative in the chamber of deputies for many years.

To obtain the degree, candidates must present two theses, one in Latin and one in French. The standard required is so high that the distinction has acquired the reputation of being one of the most difficult in the world. Very few students are successful at the first attempt. The subject chosen by Mlle. Duportal for her thesis was the history of art in the seventeenth century.

HOUSE OF LORDS DECIDE CASE, SAVING LANDMARKS OF ROB ROY, 'FREEBOOTER'

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Glasgow, June 6.—The birthplace of Rob Roy, the celebrated Highland freebooter, the place where he died, and his grave have been saved by a decision of the house of lords.

In the city of Glasgow a right to draw a water supply from Loch Voil and Loch Doine. If Glasgow's request had been granted it would have been necessary, since these lakes are a part of the eastern watershed, to raise the level of the lakes some fifty feet, which would have submerged

the Rob Roy landmarks.

These sentiments were laid before the house of lords in petition form, but the decision of the body, sitting in its judicial capacity, was not based upon any of these points. The ancient riparian regulations read that water from an eastern watershed shall not be diverted to western uses, and it was decided that Glasgow must forego its water supply for the prosaic reason that the city is on the wrong side of the watershed.

London, June 6.—"Red Week" will be observed by organized Socialism throughout Great Britain, beginning tomorrow. Following the example set by their continental comrades, leaders and active members of the British Socialist party will devote seven days to earnest missionary work for the cause, particularly London and the big industrial centers. The ideal set for each member is that he shall cause at least one new recruit to be enrolled under the red flag. In the larger towns there will be systematic house-to-house cantassing and distribution of Socialist literature.

A variety of novel methods of proselyting is promised. A number of London bus conductors have agreed to risk dismissal by handing a leaflet to each patron of their vehicles, and to the carber's chair by the declared intention of several followers of the craft to expose the doctrines of socialism to every customer during the week.

Elevator men in the tubes will explain to passengers the benefits of Socialism as a remedy for the ups and downs of life; milkmen will drive Socialist arguments home with the milk, and postmen will defy government regulations by leaving Socialist literature at the doorways of possible converts.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

"ONE of the hardest things in the world," said the late Joseph Fels, "is to convince the man with a full stomach that there is some body hungry."

Mr. Fels' aphorism is very true in the sense in which he means it, and true in a thousand other senses besides.

It is very difficult for anyone who has not experienced any given form of discomfort to sense that discomfort and realize that other people feel it.

The well-fed man may know, as an abstract proposition, that other people are hungry, but he does not sense it as an actual, painful fact.

For instance, I have often noticed that a woman who has had to prepare meals and who therefore knows how hard it is to keep them appetizing if they are delayed, will seldom permit herself to be late to the table. It is almost invariably the masculine members of the family, or those feminine members who have not had experience in housework, who are persistently careless about being on time to their meals.

A mother told me the other day that her older daughter was much more considerate and sympathetic to her than her younger. "You see," she explained,

"my older daughter is married and has children of her own, and that makes a great deal of difference, my dear. I don't blame Hilda, for I'm sure she will be different when she has children of her own, but I know how much mothers suffer for children and how much children mean to them."

It takes either much experience or much imagination to be truly unselfish.

The most unselfish man in intention whom I know is sometimes quite selfish in deed because he lacks imagination. He is generous to a fault with money; he gives his wife more luxuries than he has himself; he does many kind things for her. But because he utterly lacks imagination to sense the things that will make her fuel hurt or unhappy he is sometimes very selfish indeed.

The same place which is paved with good intentions is walled in with the selfishness of those who mean to be unselfish but don't have enough imagination to know how to be.

"How so?" you say. "Should one be blamed for lack of imagination?"

Surely, my friend. For this kind of imagination—perhaps we do better to call it the ability to put yourself in his place—is something which every one of us could and should cultivate.

Women Worth While

MRS. ARTHUR MURRAY DODGE.

(By Selene Armstrong Harmon) constitution of that state, I was in the nursery playing with the children one day when a petition was brought to me to sign. The petition was in favor of equal suffrage in New York state.

"How could the ballot help women? Like a flash I knew it couldn't help them at all. I wrote on the petition, 'interesting, but not convincing.' Then I put on my hat, went down to the Waldorf and with some friends who met me there started a

OWES HER LIFE TO STRONG ARM, STOUT HEART, CLEAR HEAD

Miss Tina Townshend.

Miss Tina Townshend, a pretty New Zealand girl, who with her aunt, Mrs. Wynne Price, was a passenger on the ill-fated Empress of Ireland when that vessel went to the bottom, owes her life to her strong arm, a stout heart and a clear head. For nearly an hour after she had jumped from the sinking vessel she swam alone through the seething sea about the Empress until she was finally picked up half frozen by the cold and dead from exposure.

"Then I was married, I had five sons. My home and my children kept me so busy I forgot about women's rights and wrongs. Twenty years ago, when the women of New York made their first effort to get an equal suffrage plank inserted into the petition of my own. We got fifteen thousand women to sign a protest against equal suffrage in New York state. I have been fighting the movement ever since.

"Do you think all men, or any class of men, are more powerful because they are enfranchised? Well, I look at it this way. Somebody has to have the ballot in order to run the machinery of the government. When let the men have it, don't put it on the women. They've got more to do now than they ever got through with them."

John Ruskin.

"DO YOU PLAN YOUR MEALS?

Nine women out of ten, usually about an hour before meal time begin to fidgity around and ask herself what she will get for dinner. She thinks and then has beefsteak because it can be prepared in a few minutes. After another mealtime rolls around she is in a hurry she decides on fried potatoes.

A housekeeper who has competent help will only need to direct, but as the majority of people have all their own work to do the housewife must learn to mix brains with her planning. There is no profession where there is more need of careful planning and expenditure than in housekeeping and preparing meals.

If there are little children in the home we must remember that their digestive systems are more active than grown-ups, and that they are not so strong, so they should have wholesome, easily digested food.

Nuts should be used often but remember that they must be well masticated.

For the man who is sitting in an office of working inside, a different kind of food and less hearty is needed than for the outdoor worker.

The outdoor worker is able to digest more of the heavy foods like baked beans, oatmeal in large quantities, turnips and cabbage.

Milk and eggs are muscle building foods, dried peas, beans and lentils are also rich in nutrients.

The oil in the onion and the mineral matter in all of our vegetables are valuable in our food. So it becomes necessary that we should plan our meals with great care.

Baroness Moncheur.

Baroness Moncheur, daughter of General and Mrs. Powell Clayton of Arkansas and Washington, and wife of the Belgian minister to Turkey, is now in Washington making her annual visit to her parents. Baroness Moncheur is one of the four handsome daughters of General Clayton, one of whom is the wife of the British minister to Cuba, another is the Countess de Sibour of Washington and the fourth is the wife of Major S. G. Jones of the army.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I am to be married soon. Would you kindly advise me what kind of dress and shoes or pumps I should wear?

(2) I am 20 years old and going with a fellow who is 23. My father objects to our wedding, for he is English, but he is a very nice young man; he doesn't think he can go in any stockings—that's why my father objects to my wedding. Would you advise me to have any wedding at his place for his mother is very kind?

(3) Would you advise me to my father, for I am not staying at home. He only advised me what I should do about it, for I am awfully worried about it.

DOLLY GRAY.

Wear the tights, as they are certainly more comfortable when swimming.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am near seventeen years old. I have a neighbor who is very kind to me. I meet him very often when I go to the store and he always asks me to come over to his house. He has no father—just a mother. He has no bad habits and is very good looking.

One afternoon I met him and he asked me to come to see his work, as he paints beautifully. I said I would come, but I never went. Now he never stops me and talks to me any more. I just pass him and he says to me, "I have a date with a girl, but I know he comes for me, because he said he thought I was pretty and he likes my ways."

MISS C. S.

The artist probably considers you only a little girl. It was wrong for you to say you would go and then not keep your word. However, you should not have promised to go at all, unless you took an older and responsible member of your own family with you.

A man doesn't necessarily care a great deal for a girl when he tells her she is pretty and he likes her ways. He has probably heard that a great many other girls, his dear, are real, but you will find a way of meeting you properly and of showing you that he respects you by asking you to call at your home and meet your family.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I would like to know if it is necessary to whitewash a bird cage (breeding cage) to breed young canaries in, and if the whitewash would do the birds any harm.

MRS. PEKO.

The cage should be kept very clean and occasionally a little sulphur sprinkled around it. Keep a bag of sulphur hanging in the cage. It does not think the cage should be whitewashed.

Household Hints

THINGS WORTH KNOWING

Before using a new comb wash it in soapy water, and when dry rub with a little olive oil. It will then last twice as long.

To make jam or marmalade look clear when you skin it add a piece of butter the size of an egg before removing the fruit from the fire.

When next cooking asparagus add a little rice. The dish will be found most satisfactory.

THE TABLE.

Puree of Jerusalem Artichokes—Put a piece of butter the size of an egg into a saucepan; let it melt, then throw into it two bay leaves, one slice of onion, three pounds of Jerusalem artichokes washed, pared and sliced, and half a pound of bacon in the boiling water for about ten minutes; then add to the gravy one-half pint of stock. Let all boil together until the vegetables are thoroughly cooked; then add one-half pint more stock, stir it well, add the pepper and salt and serve with toasted snippets.

Tomato Cream of Soup—Cut up a dozen ripe tomatoes; place in a sauce pan and stew until tender. Rub through a strainer. Thicken with three tablespoomfuls of cornstarch, rubbed to a paste with a tablespoomful of butter. Pour a quart of scalding milk in slowly, in which a pinch of soda has been dissolved. Season with salt, pepper and sugar.

Green Lettuce Salad—Prepare two large lettuces. Wash, drain and shred them finely and put them into the salad bowl. Cut four ounces of bacon in dice, fry these with a finely minced onion for five or six minutes and shake the pan over the fire to prevent them browning. Add to the bacon little salt (the amount will depend upon the quality of the bacon), one-half teaspoonful of pepper and one tablespoomful of vinegar; pour all over the lettuce and mix thoroughly.

He Listen to All.

Fontenelle listened to everything and he offended no one by disputing anything. At the close of his life he was asked the secret of his success, and he replied that it was by observing two maxima. "Everybody may be right" and "Everything may be so."

SULPHUR FOR ECZEMA

APPLIED LIKE COLD CREAM IT STOPS ITCHING AND DRIES SKIN ERUPTIONS RIGHT UP

With the first application of bold-sulphur cream the angry itching attending any eczema eruption ceases and its remarkable healing powers begin. Sulphur, says a renowned dermatologist, just common bold-sulphur, made into a thick cream will soothe and heal the skin when irritated and broken out with Eczema or any form of eruption. The moment it is applied all itching ceases and after two or three applications the Eczema disappears, leaving the skin clear and smooth.

He tells Eczema sufferers to get from any good pharmacy an ounce of bold-sulphur cream and apply it to the irritated, inflamed skin, the same as you would any cold cream. For many years this soothing, healing sulphur has occupied a secure position in the treatment of cutaneous affections by reason of its parasite-destroying property. It is not only parasiticidal, but also antipruritic, antiseptic and remarkably healing in all irritable and inflammatory conditions of the skin. While not always establishing a permanent cure it never fails to instantly subdue the irritation and heal the Eczema right up and it is often years later before any eruption again appears on the skin. This is published for Walter Luther Dodge Co., Cincinnati, Ohio.

ORGANIZATION NEEDED

Definite Program of Protest Upon Which All Can Agree and Every one Understand Is Urged.
(By Ellis P. Ulmer.)

Milwaukee, June 6. The week has been the meeting of the Democratic State Committee, developed to a certainty the fact that was already more than suspected, that the two factions of the party are as badly divided and as bitter toward one another as the Progressive Republican camps. What has been the danger from the beginning of the discussion of our high-toned and tremendous extravagance is that it would all end in talk. This year is likely because there are so few who really know what ought to be done, and so little real cooperation and centralization of effort. That there is something serious about the matter everybody admits, even Dr. Charles McCarthy in a speech in New York has been quoted as saying that "The trouble is that we have organized so rapidly in the past, we have not known what to do." He was speaking generally of Americans, but we can hardly make application of his momentous knowledge.

What we need most is to have a few sensible men get together and see if they can formulate a definite program and a definite program for a change upon which any considerable number of people can agree, and then everybody can understand, such a program is wanted, and I believe the people will have more confidence in it if it bears no label of party and nothing in any shade. The voter can be led to do the right thing and put them up to the men especially to candidates for the legislature, for whom he is asked to vote. There is now some plan made before hand that focuses the objections and the desires of the voters of the state every community will have one of its own and a legislature of mere protest will be elected and it will go to Madison and fail of the people's efforts and disappoint their hopes.

There is an utter confusion as to what they have been elected to do.

Place of Concessions. To illustrate what I mean, take the question of commissions. I was one of the first to publicly advocate the regulation of public service corporations in this state, but I did not imagine the length to which the commission has been loaded with executive and judicial duties. Perhaps I can best illustrate what I could not, under our constitution foresee, by a quotation from Prof. John R. Compton:

"The commission is a fourth branch of the government, combining but not assuming the work of the three other branches. It is a legislature continually in session, yet the power of legislation is not delegated. It is an executive sharing with the governor the enforcement of laws, but also enforcing its own orders."

Prof. Frederick C. Huys, formerly a lecturer in political science at our state university, and recently announced as about to return to Madison in connection with a new magazine, naïvely tells us:

"Our university is the fourth department of state, along with the judicial, executive and legislative branches. There is no provision for this in the constitution, no reference to it in the laws. But whether you sit in the office of the governor or of President Van Hise you see evidence of the most intimate relationship between the two."

Such quotations suggest that the indictment against our objectionable taxes and growing expenses has not yet been drawn. The disease is fundamental and the remedy cannot be simple, and without a thorough diagnosis. So far we have only felt of the patient's pulse, and we know that it is above normal.

Perhaps some of the citizens of Manitowoc county have started upon a plan to get a better understanding where a special meeting was called for work in the M. M. degree.

Mr. and Mrs. Ole Brunsvoord of Iowa arrived in the village and will spend some time visiting with Mr. Brunsvoord's father and other relatives.

L. M. Larson had the misfortune to cut his hand very badly with a chisel on Thursday morning. It required several stitches to draw the wound together.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the M. M. degree held a very successful meeting in the church basement on Friday afternoon.

T. O. Rine is putting in a gasoline lighting plant into his residence which has recently been remodeled.

World has been received from Wesley Memorial Hospital of Chicago that Mrs. Wesley Jones underwent a successful operation there on Wednesday morning and that she is doing nicely. This news is very gratifying to her many friends.

John E. Eggen motored to Chicago on Thursday with the transacted business and returned on Friday.

Fran Corry has sold his interest in the Orfordville creamery to his partner, Fred Bartling, who will conduct the business alone. Mr. Corry has not decided on what he will do, but is looking with some favor on farming. During his residence in Orfordville he has made many friends, who wish him well in his new undertaking.

QUEEN VICTORIA'S

Favorite Song by Sir Arthur Sullivan.

The favorite song of Queen Victoria was composed by Sir Arthur Seymour Sullivan, who was afterward knighted by Her Majesty. This favorite song of England and England's Queen was the "The Lost Chord," which Sir Arthur composed at the bedside of a dying brother. He has written many popular songs, but is best known as the composer of "H.M.S. Pinafore," "The Pirates of Penzance," "A发声," and "The Mikado," and was associated in his work with William Gilbert as his librettist. His popular hymns include "Heaven is My Home" and "O'erward, Christian Soldiers," which find their place in nearly all collections of sacred music.

"The Lost Chord" and other world famous songs by Sullivan are printed in "Heart Songs—a volume of world-wide music now being offered by this paper to its readers. Read the terms upon which it may be had, published in the coupon elsewhere in today's paper.

There was continual shooting for a

Want Ad Philosophy

I journeyed back by stage-coach down that old familiar road, and tears unbidden came into my eyes. Reading this you may think that so long as I had won what this world is pleased to claim a fair amount of success, I might have journeyed back to the home of my childhood via automobile. My fancy and the country where I was bound for said the stage-coach.

I was making a day of it in pretty near every sense of the word, along the lines of retrospection. I even had in my pocket a few of the little trinkets my parents had given me in the years that lay far behind me. With reluctance I returned them to my pocket as the driver pulled up at a little jerk-water station to allow the horses a drink and rest. I entered the little store for a cigar. It was not until the next day I discovered that in stuffing back my keepsakes I had lost a little ring that my Mother had given to me to remember the night that I had proudly stood up in School and explained to a patient audience, just what was the matter with Mark Anthony.

I had not lived in Chicago for thirty years for nothing. I promptly advertised in our little handbill of a paper for my keepsake. Yes! I found it, for everyone reads the want ads. do you?

Katherine quailed before this sudden outburst. Then the hope of influencing the woman to divorce her husband spurred her on and she replied:

"Yes, there is."

"Is she—" Mary was unprepared for the admission in spite of all she had said. Her voice broke—"Is she young?"

"Yes," came from Katherine. Even at that moment it occurred to her that the situation was unparalleled—the wife asking her—"the other woman"—about herself.

"Many years' difference in our ages?"

"I think so."

"Is she pretty?"

"People say she is."

Mary experienced a sudden revulsion of feeling.

"I don't believe it," she cried, refusing to believe what was not pleasant to believe. "Dan Slade wouldn't be mistaken."

As Katherine made no reply, she went on. "But you seem to be sure?"

"I'm certain," answered Katherine, evenly and without emotion.

"Do you know her?"

The lute at Katherine's throat fluttered with her rapid breathing.

"I—yes, slightly."

"Why, Dan Slade have another woman in my old place! So that's it?" as Looked Straight Into the Eyes of Dan Slade.

Katherine remained silent. "I'm much obliged. I'll keep my word. He can have his divorce any way he wants it. She can have him and his name and his money," her voice became still. "Here, I'll give you something to give him," and she darted into the adjoining bedroom. "It will remind her of something she hasn't got—his youth! His youth! His youth!" and she thrust before Katherine's eyes the picture of Dan Slade when they were first married, the picture she had always worn. "That's the way he looked when he was young. Tell her she can keep it." And she forced the brooch into Katherine's reluctant fingers. "She can see what she's missed! Well, I'm done with it—and with both of them. There!" and weak from her frenzied outburst, she sank into a chair. There was intense silence for a moment. Katherine stood as if petrified. Mary sat with brooding eyes, thinking. She was the first to speak.

"Well, there's one comfort. It ain't as though I had any children. Who'd ever have thought we would have come to this—here in this house. If I had had a baby, here's where it would have been born—and that's the real reason I stuck to this house—it ain't spunk.

"We were both very young," she talked meditatively, more to herself than to Katherine. "I was awfully happy. I couldn't wish you any better, dear," and she turned impulsively to the girl who sat amazed, breathlessly watching her. "Then hoping to have a child by some young man you cared for. There's no happiness like it. But one day there was an accident in the mine and they came and told me he was hurt—and I thought, 'praps, he was dead—and my sudden fear for him robbed us of our little child and me of all the hope of ever—'"

Katherine's voice broke with the agony of all childless good women since the beginning of time.

"There, there, there," she crooned, as she patted Katherine's head. Overcome with an emotion she could not control, Katherine clasped her arms about her comforter and wept softly and quietly on her breast.

Bob too surprised to believe his own eyes, came up to her.

"Katherine!" he exclaimed.

"Oh, Bob, I'm so ashamed!" Katherine confessed as she got to her feet and stumbled into his arms, crying out for forgiveness and the love she had so cruelly and so thoughtlessly flung aside.

"I understand, I understand," Bob was very gentle and forgiving as he took her in his arms.

"I love you, Bob," she sobbed. "I'm old and there's another woman—a younger," the tears were streaming down her cheeks now and Katherine's heart ached in sympathy with her.

"Come," he said, leading her tenderly toward the door. "We'll talk it over on the way home."

CHAPTER XI.

Befor Bob could open the door it was pushed in from the outside, and as Katherine looked up, she looked straight into the eyes of Dan Slade. For a moment the room was electric with the intensity of the situation. Then the girl lifted her head proudly and met Slade's eyes again. In them he saw a light he had never seen there before, a light of soft tenderness and deep joy, a look that made his heart start as he realized what he had lost.

"Good morning, Mr. Slade," she said coldly as Bob led her out into the summer sunshine and to life and love.

As Slade, hat in hand, stood gazing at his wife, Mary realized that for the first time in all their married life she had the advantage. For once the roles of the humble and the domineering were reversed. There was a long pause, awkward only for Slade, for Mary was quite at ease. He coughed several times, and then, in a manner he thought quite appropriate, asked:

"What did that girl come here for—Miss—er—"

"Oh—forgotten her name?" came from Mary, mockingly. "Miss Strickland came just for a visit."

"Well, what did she want?" Slade demanded.

"She came to find out what I meant to do." There was a world of irony in Mary's tone.

"What has that got to do with her? I don't approve of a woman coming into my house to find out what you—I don't like it! It's a bit of impudence. What else did she have to say? Did she—er—"

"She's not a very confidential girl," returned Mary, evasively.

"I see. So she and Robert have made up?" Slade considered this master stroke. By continuing such questions he might get at the real state of affairs.

"Yes."

"Well, well—I'll have to do something for them." Slade was paternally patronizing, but he did not deceive Mary.

"Your business out here today must be very urgent. What is it?"

Slade tried frantically to find a reason for his visit. When he had left town it was for the one reason of trying to bully Mary into leaving the cottage and agreeing to a divorce.

With the complexion of matters so changed he was at a complete loss to explain his visit. He was irritated and annoyed. He was not used to having the tables so completely turned on him. More than that, the little cottage never looked more inviting. As a matter of fact, Slade had often found the demands of his new life considerable of a nuisance and as a whiff of the savory lamb stew came to his nostrils, a memory of the peace and contentment of the old life flashed through his mind.

Nothing at the club had been especially tasty of late. More than that, the drive down had given him an appetite. "Cooking a stew, Mary?" he asked rather abruptly and inconsequently.

"Just one of my old stews." Mary's voice was indifferent. She was thinking. She was the first to speak.

oughly disgusted with her husband, now that she knew just what he had planned to do. Jealousy and outraged pride were in her heart. This man, for whom she had worked and whose very faults and failings she had loved, had been deliberately planning to thrust her aside for a woman who had enjoyed only the sweets of life, a woman whose youth and beauty and social position put Mary completely out of the contest. The very thought was salt in her wounded heart.

"I'll stay to dinner, if I may," announced Slade, removing his gloves and laying aside his coat.

"Certainly. Take your old chair, if you like." There was none of the enthusiasm that might have been in Mary's voice if he had come earlier in the day. She was formally, painstakingly polite. "You can talk over your business while we eat."

Slade watched his wife from under lowered lids as he ate. He feared that Mary knew everything. This calm, constrained atmosphere was more baffling than an emotional outburst would have been.

"Why did you come, Dan?" Mary was rather enjoying his discomfort. "Oh, yes, I—I'll take my coffee now, if I may, good and strong."

Mary dropped in two lumps and the right amount of cream, more from long habit than any desire to please him.

"I came out here to—Do you know I rather like my dinner at noon hour. We used to have it here. Aren't you eating?"

"Oh, yes, I'll eat," replied Mary, "but you haven't told me why you came out."

"I came out here today to remonstrate with you for living in this house," Slade blurted out, after a pause, "but—I've sort of changed my mind," and he reached for the pickle jar. "These pickles fairly make my mouth water. They're very good," he went on, appreciatively.

"Well, what's changed you?" Mary refused to be diverted by the subject of dinner at noon or the all-important matter of pickles.

GRANDMA SEZ—

"I read the other day where a doctor said, 'Take a few pickles atop both ears with the fingers of each hand and drink water slowly from a cup.' Produce sneezing, pain in the tongue out and put a piece of sugar or soda on it. Land cakes! I tried it and I found that I didn't have enough hands to do the trick."

"Oh, are they?" retorted the customer. "is so much smaller at the bottom of the basket than at the top."

"Waaah," replied the old man.

"P'lates is growin' so fast now that by the time I get a basketful dug, the last ones is about twice the size of the first."

"Here," said the proprietor of the place, "is a little gift for you and Jim. Each bottle is finest old Scotch Whisky. You drop in when you're way and give him this, will you?"

FEELS LIKE

A NEW WOMAN

As Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Dispelled Backache, Headaches and Dizziness.

Piqua, Ohio.—"I would be very ungrateful if I failed to give Lydia E.

Pinkham's Vegetable Compound the praise it deserves, for I have taken it at different times and it always relieved me when other medicines failed, and when I hear a woman complain I always recommend it. Last winter I was attacked with a severe case of organic weakness. I had backache, pains in my hips and over my kidneys, headache, dizziness, lassitude, had no energy, limbs ached and I was always tired. I was hardly able to do my housework. I had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound on one other occasion, and it had helped me so I took it again and it has built me up, until now I feel like a new woman. You have my hearty consent to use my name and testimonial in any way and I hope it will benefit suffering women."—Mrs. ORPHEA TURNER, 431 S. Wayne St., Piqua, Ohio.

Women who are suffering from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

A Convenience And A Safeguard

If you have ever stumbled on the dark basement steps, you can realize what a convenience it is to have an Electric Light switch at the head of the stairs.

When planning your new home or the remodeling of your old one, don't forget the switches on the basement stairs, or the switch to light the second floor lights from the first floor. Remember to include closet lights, porch lights, baseboard sockets for flat irons and other appliances. It's simpler and less expensive to plan these things before the actual work is started.

If you are going to remodel or build phone us and we will be glad to call and tell you what the cost will be to have the wires installed for these many conveniences.

A SIMPLE SHINGLE HOUSE—By John Henry Newson "Home of Character" No. 157

This little house, of the Dutch colonial type, while inexpensive, is one that possesses a simple charm. The side walls and room are in shingles and can be stained such colors as would be desired by the purchaser, but the most harmonious scheme would be to have the shingles brown, as also all of the exterior woodwork, with the roof shingles a very much darker brown and the sash painted white or cream.

The floor plan has a center hall with the dining room and living room on each side and the stairs extending up from the hall to the second floor. The kitchen has an ice room and a pantry and a rear porch with stairs to grade landing and cellar. The second floor has three bedrooms, all of ample size, and a small hall. The attic is reached by a stairway from the second floor and the bathroom is over the kitchen.

This design 32x26 feet would be very attractive with the entire interior enameled white, with birch doors, stained to imitate mahogany. The first floor would be equally attractive in hardwood, stained and waxed.

Could be built in most localities for from $3000 to $3500.

If you are thinking of building let The Gazette Homes of Character Department help you through advice from John Henry Newson. Address your inquiries to him "Homes of Character" Dept., The Gazette. Give the numbers of houses concerning which you make inquiry.
